

Settler/Colonial Violences:
Black and Indigenous Coalition Possibilities through Intergroup Dialogue
Methodology [Abstract]

Kelsey Dayle John and Kimberly Williams Brown

This essay collages theories (settler colonialism, transnational feminism, Black and Indigenous feminist thought, and critical theory) for the purpose of dialoguing together through land-based Black and Indigenous solidarities. In our dialogue, we invite readers to think about how choosing theories and identifying intentions is a methodology of coalition. We demonstrate how this might materialize in three coalition possibilities: faith communities, neoslavery for dispossession and erasure, and reimagining borders.

To purchase the full article:

https://uclajournals.org/doi/abs/10.17953/aicrj.43.2.john\_brown